The land on which the Tuckahoe Inn resides has been the site of a tavern since 1848 and a place of permanent settlement since the earliest Europeans arrived in the mid-seventeenth century. Before that, it was a popular seasonal vacation spot for many transient Native Americans and the year round home of the Tuckahoes, a tribe of the Turtle Clan of the Lenni Lenapes, who gave the Inn it's name.

The Great Egg Harbor Bay and River take their name from the early Dutch explorers who, while searching for the Northwest Passage, instead found this beautiful bay lined with bird's nests and filled with eggs. The Dutch named the bay Eyrin Haven, which the English Quakers translated to Egg Harbor.

- 1695: John Somers was authorized to operate a ferry over the river. For years this ferry was the only overland transportation between Cape May and Philadelphia.
- 1777: Rebecca and Sarah Stillwell noticed a British Ship in Great Egg Harbor Bay. They reportedly fired a cannon at advancing British redcoats, who retreated.
- 1801: Thomas Beesley sold the home that was once across the street to sea captain John Chattin, who coined it the Chattin House.
- 1849: Thomas Beesley officially changed the name of the town to Beesley's Point.
- 1851: Beesley's Point gets its first post office!
- 1900: The Chattin House across the street was a social house notoriously known for its riotous parties and good times until it became a private residence.
- 1915: The Chattin House became Bay Front Training School, a nautical academy operated by Sea Isle City mayor Clyde Van Hook.
- During World War 1: Mabel Clay converted the Chattin House into a Red Cross headquarters.
- 1927: The toll bridge connecting route 9 from Beesley's Point to Somers Point was built.
- 1953: Garden State Parkway bridge was completed.
- 1961: The Beesley's Point Hotel was partially destroyed in a fire. The only remaining part of that building is the iron fireplace located on the porch.
- 1963: Charles Harp restored and opened the Tuckahoe Inn. Charles Harp's son Peter Harp continued operating the quaint, rustic restaurant until 1997.
- 1997: Tyson Merryman, along with his mother Gerry and sister Vicki, purchased the Tuckahoe Inn.
- February 1997: Tuckahoe Inn reopened under the Merryman family, continuing a historic tradition.
- 2004: Toll bridge connecting route 9 was closed. This bridge was torn down over multiple years.
- 2017: The Chattin House across the street was torn down due to safety concerns.
- May 2019: B.L. England Power Plant officially shut down production.
- October 2021: Beesley's Point Park officially opened, featuring a walking path along the parkway bridge, a picnic shelter, a modern day boardwalk, and a boat ramp.
